City Encourages Residents to Donate Used Clothes during Holiday Season

Audit shows that 62 per cent of clothes in landfill could have been reused

MOUNT PEARL, NL – The City of Mount Pearl is launching a curbside clothing collection pilot for one week in December to help reduce the amount of garbage that ends up in the landfill. During December 12 - 16, residents can simply place unwanted clothing and gently used textiles at the curb on their regular waste collection day, and the city will collect these items for reuse. Donated items will go to the Canadian Diabetes Association.

“In our last waste audit, it was determined that 62 per cent of our textiles that made it to the landfill could have been reused. The curbside clothing collection is a great way to help the environment. It also provides an opportunity to donate items that may be exactly what others are looking for,” says Mayor Randy Simms.

According to the City of Mount Pearl’s waste audit, 280 tonnes of residential waste fell into the category of textiles. Approximately 170 tonnes were fit for reuse. To encourage residents to recycle, the City will be distributing information brochures to each household, along with two clear bags that can be filled with clothes.

The Canadian Diabetes Association says that their clothing donation is typically slower in December, and is excited to see the City pilot the collection of used textiles at the curb.
